Personal competences

after Engelmann (2019, p. 73)

Belief in our own abilities is of vital importance; if we are convinced that we can be successful, we will align our actions accordingly.

Think about the tasks that you have to do at work – even those that you sometimes find difficult, such as familiarizing yourself with new software, for instance.

- Do you believe in your own abilities in these situations?
- What specific skills do you have that enable you to overcome these challenges?
- How can your personal skills help you in this regard?

Go through various situations in your mind and make notes of your answers in the blank table on the following page. You are welcome to also apply these considerations to your private life and find further examples.
